

TWO SLAYERS DIE IN 15 MINUTES IN CHAIR AT SING SING

"Bangor Billy," Yeggman, Tells Before Death of Innocent Man Serving Life Term.

GOES CALMLY TO DEATH.

Frederick Gebhardt Dragged to Execution With Lie on His Lips.

Within fifteen minutes' time two Greater New York murderers died in the chair at Sing Sing early to-day. One "Bangor Billy," yeggman and burglar, walked to his death with a kind of sullen dignity, after doing what he could to right a wrong for which an innocent man had suffered. The other—a bigamous wife murderer—was literally dragged to the place of execution with a lie on his trembling lips to the very last. This was Frederick Gebhardt, who made a business of proving on women.

Three more than the usual number of witnesses saw the pair shocked to death. These three were Dr. Eugene C. Herrera, Dr. Carlos F. Gariga and Victor H. Garange, composing a commission sent here by the republic of Cuba to study our methods of criminal procedure.

"Bangor Billy's" real name was Thomas Barnes. On Feb. 22, 1910, he shot John T. Leonard, a former chum. Both men had been convicted for robbing a post-office at Raleigh, N. C. After his release Leonard became a stool pigeon for the police and set out to spy upon his old pal. Barnes found out who the traitor was. He walked into a thieves' resort which Leonard managed at No. 20 South street, Brooklyn, and put a bullet in the informer's head.

SAYS INNOCENT MAN IS HELD AS SLAYER.

Barnes spent his last hours writing a letter to his counsel, Edward J. Rife, of No. 57 Fulton street, Brooklyn, in which he asked that steps be taken to free a former comrade. He said that a holdup man named "Chester Billy" was really guilty of a murder at Dover, N. H., on July 4, 1901, for which one John Williams is now serving a life sentence. Then, after bidding goodby to the death watchmen who had guarded him, he went with composure and steadiness to his end.

Gebhardt had been killed in the chair just before this. His fears had overcome him completely at the summons. For hours he had been groveling on the floor of his cell in a perfect torment of terror. His legs refused to bear him and the guards dragged him to the chair.

He kept murmuring, "I didn't do nothing; please don't kill me; I didn't do nothing," through the straps that bound his head against the chair. Perhaps it was because he was more than half dead from fright already that the current made such short work of him. Within four minutes after he entered the death chamber, the attendants were unbinding his corpse.

GEHARDT KILLED WIFE AFTER BIGAMY.

Gebhardt, or Otto Mueller, which may have been his real name, had a wife and family living in Astoria when in February, 1908, he courted and married Anna Luther, a servant girl. He went with her on a honeymoon tour to Germany.

Upon their return in April he got possession of her small savings and her belongings and then turned her to a lonely strip of woods near Astoria, Long Island. There he told her he already had one wife and was going to leave her. While she had her arms about his neck begging him not to abandon her he shot her through the brain.

Months later the corpse mouldering in the scraps of the victim's wedding finery was found by rabbit hunters. Through the tracing of a discolored slip of paper showing that on a given date certain household articles had been purchased at a small town on the Rhine the woman's identity was established, and after that the detectives found it easy to track down the stupid Gebhardt.

He confessed his crime at first, but afterward recanted and made a hard fight for his life. A week ago Gov. Dix refused to grant his last appeal for clemency.

CHARLES BELLAMY CULVER, WELL-KNOWN WRITER, DEAD.

Was Former Member of Evening
World Staff and a Contributor to Magazines.

Newspaper men generally are mourning the death of Charles Bellamy Culver, a veteran writer, who died at his home, No. 20 West Ninety-eighth street, on Friday, from a complication of diseases. Mr. Culver, who was born in this city, graduated from Columbia in 1888. His first newspaper connection was with the New York Herald, after which he became a member of The Evening World's staff. His connection with this paper lasted eleven years. He left the newspaper business three years ago, becoming a contributor to magazines.

He is survived by a widow, to whom he leaves considerable property, including an interest in the famous Hook Mountain on the Palisades.

BROOKLYN MAN SLAIN.
POLICE HUNT RELATIVE.

Victim Found Dead in Street Had Quarrelled About Wife, From Whom He Had Parted.

The Brooklyn Detective Bureau is searching to-day for the man who shot Benevenuto Aculla of No. 141 West street, whose body was found last night at Leonard and Withers street by Policeman Kennedy O'Brien of the Hayward street station. Aculla had one bullet wound in his neck and another in his breast, and close by lay a revolver with three expended cartridges. The body was identified by Joseph Curli, a brother-in-law, with whom Aculla lived, and the story told by him has set the police on a hunt for another relative who had championed the cause of Aculla's wife, with whom he had not lived for several years. Aculla, Curli and the man for whom the police are looking married three sisters in Italy, and, according to Curli, there had been a number of quarrels between his brothers-in-law.

The Cammeyer Exposition

White Shoes For Summer Wear

A set policy in this great business includes a complete and comprehensive display of White Footwear the middle of June.

This is done so that the Greater New York public can supply their needs early in these seasonable goods, getting at the same time an absolutely correct idea as to the dictates of fashion in Summer Footwear.

We would especially call to the attention of those people maintaining summer homes at a distance from the city that this is an opportunity to fit out in White Footwear for the Summer, at one sitting, under pleasant surroundings, with the assurance that the usual broad-gauged Cammeyer guarantee covers all the merchandise—and it has a pretty deep significance when attached to a shoe—as you probably know.
